

Fly Lines From CADDIS

CADDIS News

Fly Rod Winner!

Congratulations to Grant Ehren, the winner of the Gloomis fly rod raffle – good fishing Grant.

Club Meeting

Dustin Sahlman from Cutthroat Anglers in Little Rock will be our speaker for the January meeting. We'll be looking forward to hearing what he has to say on Monday January 13th. That's this coming Monday. The time and location are the same – 7:00 PM at All Saints Episcopal Church on South Phoenix in Russellville.

CADDIS Banquet

The annual CADDIS banquet is scheduled for Saturday, February 22nd. Davy Wotton will be our guest speaker. Davy is a wealth of knowledge when it comes to fly fishing and fly tying. His fly tying expertise is nothing short of phenomenal. Make plans to attend.

Quote

"When the Earth is whole, it is forgiving, resilient, covering burned-over land with blankets of fireweed, then alder thickets, then cold pine forests; filtering water through wetlands bright with sky; in every sun-washed cell, creating oxygen; again and again transforming death into life. But once it is damaged, profaned, the power of the Earth to heal itself seeps away, and with it goes its power to nurture us."

-- Kathleen Dean Moore

870-449-4955	FFF Certified Instructor	Fly Fishing Guide Service Ozark Trout & Smallmouth
P.O. Box 27 Yellville, AR 72687

Dedicated to promoting the enjoyment of fly fishing through education, conservation and sportsmanship.

FF ClubWire

FFF CODE OF ANGLING ETHICS

Several years ago, an article published in one of the national sporting periodicals conveyed an interesting message about outdoor ethics. The author discussed his recent attendance at a national sporting society meeting where the issue of sporting ethics was on the agenda. Attendees generally agreed with the many views and positions expressed concerning ethics for the hunter. But, according to the author, when the topic changed to ethics for the angler, few views and positions were discussed and none agreed upon.

Since that time several articles about ethics have appeared in other sporting periodicals, some even addressing angling ethics. But these discussions seemed to lack a unifying theme or approach. The issue of angling ethics did seem to call out for examination by the Federation of Fly Fishers. During the Strategic Planning meeting held in conjunction with our 2001 annual show, those in attendance unanimously endorsed the concept that FFF needed to develop and promote a common angling ethic. A committee was chartered to research and develop a code.

The work of that committee resulted in the following FFF Code of Angling Ethics. The efforts of many went into this work, and several contributed more than their fair share. A special thank you is extended to Jim Boyd, Susan Halblom, Jerry McBride and Marty Sheldon; without their contributions the code would have been lacking.

As the reader will note, the Code expresses the belief that ethical behavior is a key component of the angling experience, and that anglers must behave ethically towards each other, non-anglers, and the environment. Ethical angling behavior is not a destination for one to boost about reaching. Rather, it is a continuous journey that will improve the overall angling experience.

(Gary Grant, FFF Treasurer)

FFF's Code

The mission of the Federation of Fly Fishers is to lead activities that enhance and support the fly fishing experience for all anglers who fish with the artificial fly. As part of our efforts to educate through fly fishing, we believe that ethical behavior is a key component of the angling experience. While the need to preserve for all anglers the natural beauty and quality of fisheries for future generations is paramount, consideration for fellow anglers cannot be overlooked.

FFF believes it essential that fly anglers in all waters embrace an ethic that embodies consideration for the environment and for others whether they are fishing or not. This Code of Angling Ethics complements the Catch and Release philosophy that is the hallmark of the Federation of Fly Fishers and reflects the importance of ethical behavior for all anglers. Moreover, it provides a framework for improving the angling experience by combining consideration of the fishery with respectful conduct towards fellow anglers. Overall, the policy denotes a journey in ethical behavior for fly anglers and not a destination.

Person-to-person and person-to-resource ethics go hand-in-hand. Fly anglers strive to understand and practice the land ethic of Aldo Leopold, which extends ethical consideration to the land, plants, animals, fish, and water that comprise the entire ecosystem. An important part of this land ethic is that fly anglers support those programs that sustain high species diversity, and do not support policies that could cause the premature extinction of another species. The Native Fish Policy of the Federation of Fly Fishers is based on this ethic of preventing fish species extinction.

The following nine behaviors comprise the Federation of Fly Fishers' Code of Angling Ethics:

1. Angling ethics begin with understanding and obeying laws and regulations associated with the fishery. Fly anglers understand that their conduct relative to laws and regulations reflects on all anglers. Angling ethics begin with and transcend laws and regulations governing angling and the resources that sustain the sport.
2. The opportunity to participate in the sport of fly fishing is a privilege and a responsibility. Fly anglers respect private property and always ask permission before entering or fishing private property. They seek to understand and follow the local customs and practices

- associated with the fishery. They share the waters equally with others whether they are fishing or engaging in other outdoor activities.
3. Fly fishers minimize their impact on the environment and fishery by adopting practices that do not degrade the quality of the banks, waters, and the overall watersheds upon which fisheries depend. These practices include avoiding the introduction of species not native to an ecosystem, and cleaning and drying fishing gear to prevent the inadvertent transport of invasive exotics that may threaten the integrity of an aquatic ecosystem. In simplest terms, fly anglers always leave the fishery better than when they found it.
 4. Fly anglers endeavor to conserve fisheries by understanding the importance of limiting their catch. "Catch and release" is an important component of sustaining premium fisheries that are being over-harvested. Fly anglers release fish properly and with minimal harm. They promote the use of barbless hooks and angling practices that are more challenging but which help to sustain healthy fish populations.
 5. Fly anglers do not judge the methods of fellow anglers. Fly fishers share their knowledge of skills and techniques. They help others to understand that fly-fishing contributes to sound fisheries conservation practices.
 6. Fly anglers treat fellow anglers as they would expect to be treated. They do not impose themselves on or otherwise interfere with other anglers. They wait a polite time, and then, if necessary, request permission to fish through. They may invite other anglers to fish through their positions. Fly fishers when entering an occupied run or area always move in behind other anglers, not in front of them whether in a boat or wading.

7. Fly anglers when sharing the water allow fellow anglers ample room so as not to disturb anyone's fishing experience. They always fish in a manner that causes as little disturbance as practical to the water and fish. They take precautions to keep their shadow from falling across the water (walking a high bank).
8. When fishing from watercraft fly anglers do not crowd other anglers or craft. They do not block entrances to bays or otherwise impede others. Fly anglers do not unnecessarily disturb the water by improperly lowering anchors or slapping the water with paddles or oars.
9. Fly anglers always compliment other anglers and promote this Code of Angling Ethics to them whether they fish with a fly or not.

The following is a shortened version suitable to be carried by the angler:

- Fly anglers understand and obey laws and regulations associated with the fishery.
- Fly anglers believe fly fishing is a privilege and a responsibility.
- Fly anglers conserve fisheries by limiting their catch.
- Fly anglers do not judge fellow anglers and treat them as they would expect to be treated.
- Fly anglers respect the waters occupied by other anglers so that fish are not disturbed
- When fishing from a watercraft, fly anglers do not crowd other anglers or craft or unnecessarily disturb the water.
- Fly anglers respect other angling methods and promote this Code of Angling Ethics to all anglers.

Copyright by the Federation of Fly Fishers, Inc. 2002